In this way, they will surely give the couple the work of everything. Not all ESL activities in the classroom are designed for couple work. The best time to use peer work is during oral activities in the classroom are designed for couple work. The best time to use peer work is during oral activities allow students. to talk to each other for two minutes: you need a little more structure than that! Here are 7 excellent ESL pair work activities that you can use in a variety of ways for your students to talk. 1. The investigative journalist's investigative reporter is a classic peer work activity for a reason: it works! It can be used in a variety of scenarios and adapted according to specific grammar points or vocabulary that has been checking in class. The basis of the investigative reporter is for students to engage in couples and present their findings. It can be used for groups at all levels of skill from the beginning to the advance, provided that it adapts to your levels. Beginners can make a simple version, asking their couples about their family structure, favorite colors and foods, pets and hobbies. Intermediate students could benefit from a mysterious version of the game, where each student is assigned a character to play and the game concludes with the "Murderer" that feels as a result of the questions. An excellent way to prepare students for this activityRegardless of its level, it is with automal videos, trailers of movies, news and inspiring talks "and makes them personalized in personalized language lessons of language Students can see their selected either once you¢ÃÂÂve paired them up, or ahead of class for homework. The FluentU videos are all organized by level and come with interactive captions, flashcards and exercises to help students pick up new words as they watch. Through these supercharged English dialogues, news reports, interviews, movie clips and more, they¢ÃÂÂll get comfortable with the types of basic English conversations investigative journalist requires. Have fun with this game, and remember: if you give your students the tools to succeed, they¢ÃÂÂll surprise you! 2. Debate Debate is another classic that can incorporate pair or group work, depending on the size of your class. Create groups and assign each group or pair a side of an argument. Use pair work time to allow students to develop their argument and conclude with a class-wide debate. Debate is made even more interesting when you present students with authentic materials to use as support for their claims. 3. What¢ÃÂÂs Your Secret? What¢ÃÂÂs your secret? is a pair work activity that truly involves the whole class. In this game, which is a play on investigative journalist, each student writes a secret down on a piece of paper, things like: ¢ÃÂÂI play the clarinet.¢Ã or ¢ÃÂÂI have a twin.¢Ã The papers are placed in a hat and each student draws one: that¢ÃÂÂs where the game begins. What¢ÃÂÂs your secret? can either be played by allowing students to mill about the classroom freely or by setting up a speed dating scenario, where each pair has 1 minute to speak before rotating. Students may ask one another yes/no questions¢ÃÂÂthey may not ask directly if what¢ÃÂÂs on the piece of paper is true about them or not. Students then must guess to whom the secret they drew belongs. 4. It¢ÃÂÂs Your Turn: Teach a class! Is a fun activity, you assign each pair a grammar, vocab or culture point that they¢ÃÂÂll have to teach to the class. The pair works to prepare activities and plans of lessons and teach the point to the class. Unlike many of these other activities, the conclusion of this activity is based on: when the couple taught the class, the teachers the "teachers" they do! 5. The following instructions after instructions is an interesting game that offers a classroom change in the classroom. In this game, each couple's student draws an image, maintaining the role of her protected from her eyes. Ideally, images must be quite geomã © tricas. Once the image is completed, they explain to their partner, using only words, how to replicate the image. For example, if a student has drawn the stereotyme square house with a triangle roof, she could say: "Receive a square in the middle of the square, using the upper side of the square as the lower side of the triangle. . 6. Games! Yes, not many pairs work activities may seem games, but sometimes it is fun to introduce some real games in the mixture. Yes, it is not a game in which the two unique words that students do not allow them to say are and no. Combine students and play. When a student loses, he is out and the company winner is combined with another winning company. In this way, you can create a Sã Tournament, no. Other versions of the game also prohibit "maybe" and "me." Consider these versions when the game lasts too much or students need an additional challenge. 7. Games! Guess who guess what is a version of 20 questions that focuses completely on people. Students take the name of a famous person from a)!n³Aicapicitna)!n³Aicapicitna noc senolabser sotse raraperp ¡Aratisecen;A(your partner tries to quess who's in the paper making a series of questions yes/no. as if, no, quess who can be converted into a tournament style game. Conclusion of a couple's work activity remember: a couple's work activity is not a lesson in and of itself. There must be a brief introduction, letting students know what they expect to do during the activity. There must be a special conclusion, it must collect the information obtained during the activity and pass through it as a group, this will allow you to correct mistakes and also allow students to learn from so peers. Many partner work activities also benefit from being followed by an individual activity as a written response, worksheet for the task or short oral presentation to the group presenting the student's findings. Once I have mastered the art of couple work, so students will be talking (and correctly!) before you know it! It is!
